DISTINGUISHED PROFESSOR EMERITUS of Education

MORTON ENDOWMENT COMPLETED

By Joanne Fenner

Early completion of an endowment created by Dr. Robert L. Morton, '13, will enable Ohio University to establish a permanent academic chair by this fall.

Dr. Morton, distinguished professor emeritus of education, regards establishment of the new permanent professorship as "encouragement to others for similar fulfillment of purpose," and he hopes his gift "may spur others to endow additional faculty positions." The endowment of $583,000 was first announced in 1965.

A committee to begin the search for a Robert L. Morton Professor is expected to be named soon. While persons from all academic disciplines will be considered in the screening process, preference will be given to those in the fields of education and mathematics, areas of special interest to Dr. Morton.

An Ohio University faculty member for 42 years, Dr. Morton retired in 1960 and was named distinguished professor the same year. He has held positions in the Extension Division and is a former chairman in the Department of Mathematical Methods.

He is, perhaps, the most productive author ever to have taught at Ohio University. Counting each edition on which his name appears as the author or coauthor, Dr. Morton has published 189 books, 160 articles, 38 book reviews and 42 miscellaneous pieces.

"Writing," Dr. Morton asserts, "has been a professional activity, not just a hobby with me."

The sole author of nine books, Dr. Morton is a co-author of junior high and elementary school textbooks on mathematics, which in different editions represent 180 books. Among these texts was Making Sure of Arithmetic, a series used in many schools for 15 years. The successor to that series was Modern Mathematics Through Discovery, a text which has been even more popular and is in wide use today. Total sales of his elementary textbooks and workbooks have exceeded 50 million.

Since retirement, the octogenarian Athens resident has retained an active interest in University affairs. He maintained an office in the College of Education for many years after retirement and is an active member of the Collegiate Bridge Club, where townspeople meet weekly with students and faculty to play duplicate bridge. Now holder of the senior master ranking and close to becoming an advanced master, he took up serious bridge at age 76. His opponents at tournaments in several states

Trustees Approve '72-73 Budget

Three months of financial blueprinting came to a swift conclusion March 13, as Ohio University Trustees approved a $45 million operating budget for fiscal 1972-73.

The budget represents a total increase of only three and one half percent over the current year.

The budgeting process began in December, when tentative divisional control totals were determined. After that, the budget was built, line item by line item, at each academic and administrative level by committees involving scores of students, faculty and administrators.

The proposed budget was then submitted for public review. During the open hearings, which ran for more than 30 hours February 24-26, directors of the major budget units presented their budget plans and responded to questions from President Claude R. Sowle and the audience.

Requests for need-list funding from a $400,000 allocation set aside to cover needs which divisions were unable to include in their original budget totals also were discussed. Additional funds will go for more faculty and teaching assistants; professional personnel for student services, physical plant and development; a nursery school/child care center in the School of Home Economics; an administrative internship program for women and minorities, and the campus arts program.

The trustees also authorized a $10 per quarter increase in tuition, effective with the summer quarter. The tuition increase will make the quarterly instructional fee for Ohio undergraduates $210. Graduate student tuition will be $260. Remaining unchanged are the general fee and the $400 out-of-state surcharge.

Faculty salary ranges for next year also received approval. Instructors, the beginning teaching rank, can receive $6,000-$16,000, while full professors, the top rank, can receive $14,000-$34,000.

"Role Reversal Day" Promotes Understanding within University

"Putting on another person's shoes" was the theme on campus February 16, when hundreds of students, professors, administrators and community fathers exchanged positions for a day.

Role Reversal Day was part of a program which is conducted each quarter to give students the opportunity to approach contemporary issues in a somewhat different manner than is usually done in the classroom. In past quarters on University Day, as this program is generally known, the campus has participated in seminars on pollution and police-student attitudes.

On Role Reversal Day — during which classes and campus business were carried on almost as usual — some students taught classes, while their matched professors attended classes and took notes for them. In a unique switch, faculty of the School of Journalism wrote stories for The Post, the student newspaper. Students also exchanged roles with University administrative and clerical personnel, and administrators and faculty members themselves switched roles.

In the Athens community, matchups occurred between students and Mayor Donald Barrett, Police Captain Charles Cochran, Municipal Court Judge Franklin Sheeter and other city and county officials.

In many instances, participants spent half the day observing their "match" on the job, rather than strictly reversing roles for the entire day.

Perhaps the most notable reversal in roles occurred between President Claude R. Sowle and Oscar McGee, head of the non-academic employees union at Ohio University.

Role Reversal Day for them began with both participating in one of Sowle's regularly scheduled press conferences, during which McGee said that conditions between the local union and the University have improved considerably since last fall's strike.

Later in the morning, Sowle donned a Bobcat maintenance uniform and greeted McGee at his office in Seigfred Hall, where McGee has been a custodian for more than ten years. Sowle literally pushed a broom over much of the fifth floor of Seigfred.

Along with other University administrators and union officials, Sowle and McGee lunched together at the president's home, and then spent the afternoon in Cutler Hall. With McGee settled in Sowle's high-backed chair, the two men met with students and then attended a meeting of the University budget committee later in the day.

Student coordinator for the day's activities, Dale Ritter, said the idea of Role Reversal Day was to get students and non-students "to know what each other's days are really like" and to promote understanding and communication.

From that standpoint, February 16 was a successful day for Claude Sowle and Oscar McGee and for many others at Ohio University.

CBA Stays Abreast the Changing Business World

Change in the world of business has resulted in a corresponding curriculum change in the College of Business Administration at Ohio.

The college has switched from a general to a specialized approach in preparing its graduates for professional careers in the business world. Instead of a single concentration in business administration, the college now offers five majors, each requiring a minimal core of general courses and allowing business majors to take more work in their specific area of interest.

The college offers three areas which have grown out of current trends in business—accounting and quantitative methods, administrative sciences and organizational science. The other two areas of concentration are economics and economic education, the more traditional fields still in demand.

The college's new dean is John M. Peterson, a former business economist and director of the Arkansas Planning Commission. He is convinced that society needs business managers and that there are specific skills and knowledge which the business manager must have.

His concern, he says, is not with defending the right of business education to a niche in the University, but rather with devising more effective ways to teach the skills needed by the corporate world.

Dean Peterson explains that

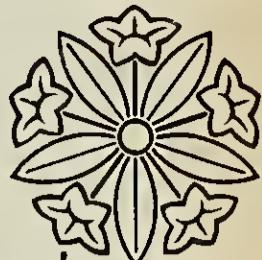

THE COLLEGE OF BUSINESS Administration has switched from a general to a specialized approach in preparing its graduates for professional careers in the business world.

corporate concern for system analysis is reflected in the newly combined Department of Accounting and Quantitative Methods. Accounting students taking courses with a system analysis point of view are trained in computers and statistical analysis which modern business demands. In the same department, quantitative methods students become better acquainted with the basic accounting data systems used by business firms.

The reorganized Department of Administrative Sciences was designed to train new-style businessmen adept at coordinating all aspects of administrative decision making, according to Peterson. Administrative sciences places the business functions of finance, production and marketing into a single teaching and administrative unit.

A third new department, organizational science, deals with the organization and management of groups of people, a challenge Dean Peterson considers the most important facing business—and indeed, society—today. Specialists in the fields of law, communication, organizational behavior and personnel management give the Department of Organizational Science a distinctly behavioral slant.

Despite the increasing emphasis on specialization, Peterson's concept of the role of business education at the college level centers around training for "entry jobs." He does not aspire to teach college seniors to think like corporation presidents, but rather he hopes each student will attain some depth of knowledge in one field of business, along with the "habits of thought" which he will need to rise into middle management.

ALUMNI REPORT

by J. David Scott, '59, MEd '60, Director, Alumni Affairs

Know outstanding alumni? Tell us.

If you know Ohio University alumni who are doing noteworthy things, send their names to Sid Beckert, '23, and they may be honored for their accomplishments. Beckert is chairman of the Alumni Association's awards committee which will choose the 1972 recipients of the Certificate of Merit, the association's highest award.

Through the award, the association has the opportunity each year to give special recognition to several alumni who have distinguished themselves in their chosen fields and/or who have rendered outstanding service to the association and the University. The awards will be presented on Homecoming Weekend.

Nominations should be accompanied by pertinent biographical information on the nominee and the name and address of the nominator and should be sent to Awards Committee, P.O. Drawer 869, Athens, Ohio 45701. Deadline for nominations is May 31.

Continuing Education

Two programs which offer alumni the opportunity for continuing education will be held in May. Dean John Wilhelm of the College of Communication has announced May 8-13 as the dates for Communication Week, and anthropology professor Dr. Robert Byles is planning a Symposium on Human Intelligence May 12 and 13.

Communication Week annually brings to campus outstanding people in communication and features seminars and lectures. This year Communication Week will focus on the problems of communicating with youth and minority groups. Among those who will take part are ABC anchorman Harry Reasoner, Russell Anderson, president of McGraw-Hill, and William Attwood, publisher of Newsday.

Experts in the fields of biology, chemistry, anthropology, psychology and sociology will take part in the Symposium on Human Intelligence. Among them will be Ohio University faculty members Dr. Thomas Wagner, chemistry; Dr. William Wood, anthropology; Dr. Arthur Saxe, sociology; Dr. Rodney Elliott, sociology, and Dr. Byles.

Evolution of the human capacity for culture; development of the race concept and modern theories of human variation, and intelligence and career success are among the topics to be covered during the symposium.

Alumni interested in attending these functions should contact David Scott.

Elliott Weekend

A committee has been selected to work with the Alumni/Development Office in planning this year's Rush Elliott Weekend, scheduled for October 13 and 14.

Serving on the committee are Dr. Raymond S. Lupse, '32, Dr. Richard W. Juvancic, '48, Dr. Donald E. Hughes, '43, Dr. Edward A. Sprague, '41, and Dr. William S. Jasper, '41.

The committee will outline a schedule of activities for the weekend, which each year features a guest lecturer who is a former student of Professor Elliott.

CIVIL RIGHTS LEADER PAYS VISIT TO CAMPUS

By Patricia L. Black

Baker Center ballroom was filled to capacity, and the standing-room-only crowd was so tightly packed that no one could move unless everyone shifted in the same direction. Outside, latecomers crowded the corridors, some standing on chairs for a better view of the speaker.

Inside, the Rev. Ralph Abernathy presented an emotional speech geared to the sentiments of a college crowd. Reverend Abernathy succeeded Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. as head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference after Dr. King's death. His appearance was sponsored jointly by the second Conference on Racism, Black Awareness Month and the government department's Herman G. James Lecture Series.

The theme of Abernathy's speech was political. He claimed that the government's executive branch has usurped the power of the legislative branch, that which represents the individual voter. Abernathy advocated a nonviolent change in the government — "a march on the ballot box to retire Richard M. Nixon and send Spiro Agnew back to Maryland for his pension."

Politics, rather than age, is the true line of demarcation in the generation gap, according to Abernathy. If one is 18 years of age and wants to drop out of America's "mess," he is not in Abernathy's younger generation, he is too old and belongs to Nixon's generation. On the other hand, if an 80-year-old uses his vote to try to bring about change and raises relevant, searching questions in letters to his congressman, he is of the younger generation.

A number of its detractors claim that the civil rights movement is dead because it has changed so much from its beginning, Abernathy said. While agreeing there has been change, the speaker maintained that only a movement that can change to fit the times has any chance of surviving. He asserted that the civil rights movement is as strong now as it ever was.

Reverend Abernathy quoted from a postcard he received shortly after returning from his recent trip to Russia. Though addressed only to "Liverlip," the card was delivered to him through the U.S. mail. "Whitey," as the card-writer identified himself, offered Abernathy $500,000 to buy transportation back to Africa for all of America's blacks. Abernathy asked the audience to look for Whitey and to ask him just one question for the blacks: "How the devil can we go back to somewhere we've never been?"

Furthermore, until all the whites return to England, France, Germany, Italy and their other ancestral homes, giving America back to the Indians, Abernathy said he'd "be damned if the black man's going back."

The omnipresent political theme manifested itself again as Abernathy said he does not support any of the candidates in the upcoming political races. For too long, he said, the Democrats have taken the blacks for granted, and the time is now for the blacks to vote for the "man with the plan" who will give a representative government, take a stand on domestic problems, give a guaranteed wage, make hunger illegal and "stop seeing America as sent by God to police the world."

Giving a final nod to politics, Abernathy closed his speech with a reference to the campus visit the following week by Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma — "Tuesday you have the politician; tonight you have the prophet!"

An Alumni Takeover!

We can promise you an extremely enjoyable time in the verdant hills of Athens if you return for Alumni Weekend June 16, 17 and 18. Spring quarter will have ended, and the campus will be ours! So come back and bask in some good memories and camaraderie. All alumni and their families are welcome and will be housed in the new South Green residence halls. Keep Off the Grass

The War Memorial sits there like an open invitation during warm weather. With guitars, frisbees, balls, dogs and sublime disregard for cause and effect, students play on what used to be the College Green and scuff things up so badly the area might better be called the College Brown. In short, they tear hell out of the grass.

Now, having reseeded for the seventh billionth time and with an eye to the relevant and timely, the maintenance crew has installed signs athwart the preferred approaches to the War Memorial.

have difficulty believing the cigar-smoking gentleman is a relative newcomer to the duplicate bridge tables.

Dr. Morton's wide-ranging recreational interests also encompass travel, fishing and golf.

He has been around the world six times and has visited every U. S. state and Canadian province, often meeting with colleagues and former students along the way. He speaks with pride of membership in the Travelers' Century Club, an organization of individuals who have logged visits to 100 or more countries.

An avid fisherman and conservationist, Dr. Morton's affection for wilderness country has taken him as far as Alaska, Northern Manitoba and the Canadian Northwest Territories. He has made a practice of returning nearly all his catch to its native waters.

A charter member of the Athens Country Club, the teacher-writer was for many years an enthusiastic golfer. He displays a number of trophies for still another unusual accomplishment—several holes-in-one.

Born in Brownsville, Ohio, in 1899, Dr. Morton did graduate work at Columbia University after graduating from Ohio University and holds both MA and PhD degrees from Ohio State University. He has taught at all grade levels, beginning as an elementary teacher in the Brownsville school system in 1907. In 1913 he became superintendent of schools in Frankfort, Ohio, and in 1918 came to Ohio University to teach at the college level.

Dr. Morton's reputation as an educator led to his appointment to numerous state and national education committees. He has served as president of the state board of the Teachers Retirement System of Ohio and as a consultant to the Ohio Educational Policies Commission.

In addition, he has written articles for more than 35 professional journals and addressed educators in 40 states. Listed in Who's Who in America for 40 years, he is a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and a member of Phi Delta Kappa, Sigma Xi and Phi Beta Kappa honorary fraternities. In 1954 he was awarded the Alumni Association Certificate of Merit for outstanding work in higher education.

Although modest about his skill in the business world, Dr. Morton is a director of the Educator and Executive Insurance Company, a firm with headquarters in Columbus.

His wife, the former Ella Jean Adams, '14, died in 1956. Both of his daughters are Ohio University graduates, Mary Morton Kadison, '36, of Myrtle Beach, S.C., and Jean Morton Webb, '36, who is deceased.

Lindley Loses Its Lovelies

The following feature was researched and written by the Journal editor, a former Lindley resident who actually admits to having a place in her heart for the old hall. Ms. Cady wrote the story keeping in mind the hundreds of liberated women who feel they're no worse off now for once having lived in Lindley. To those alumni who never knew a "Lindley Lovely," we extend our sincere condolences.

By Jan Kissner Cady, '65

Nine months ago Lindley Hall's well-worn furniture was auctioned off, and the University began remodeling the interior for office use.

While most of the rooms were left intact, walls were knocked out between some rooms to make larger offices, and connecting doors were constructed between other rooms to transform them into office suites. The rooms received a new coat of paint, carpeting was laid in some offices and large metal doors were installed in main hallways to divide office units.

Nevertheless, former residents could find their way around without much trouble, and they'd have no problem recognizing Lindley from the outside. It still looks the same, only more weathered.

The most unmistakable change is in the atmosphere of the once exclusively feminine domicile.

Lindley is now occupied by a new gang of "Lindley Lovelies" who maintain eight-to-five office hours. Filing cabinets and office machinery line the walls where beds and dressers used to hide the dust; photographs of the family, instead of the boyfriend, adorn desks, and paintings have replaced bright posters and bulletin boards on the walls.

The offices of aerospace studies, Afro-American affairs, alumni and development, alumni records, The Fund, military science, personnel, public information and the vice president for University relations are settled in, and remodeling is at a temporary halt until further state money is available.

When the University receives the necessary funds, remodeling will continue, and other administrative and academic units will move in until Lindley is filled to capacity and functioning as one of the largest office buildings on campus.

Lindley's history as a women's residence hall dates back to 1917. When it opened its doors as the third women's dorm on campus (Boyd and Howard preceded it), the Green and White reported, "It is undoubtedly the most modern, best designed and most finely appointed dormitory for women that is to be found in a state-supported university in the state."

In naming the hall Lindley, the University honored its first instructor, Jacob Lindley, who taught at Ohio from 1808 until 1838. The sculptor who chiselled the keystone on the building erroneously put in an "e", and the misspelling was accepted.

There is little recorded history of life in Lindley during its first 20 years, except for an occasional note in the Green and White telling of the weekend travels of the women students.

torture on the rocks and solitary confinement with bread and water for nourishment, have been done away with. Democracy and freedom have taken over and now coed court reigns to deal with our offenders."

Coed court temporarily took away some of an offender's privileges. Usual offenders acquired too many late minutes or received too many warnings for noise during quiet hours or some such thing. Coed court became an established part of life in Lindley and existed throughout the sixties.

The forties were filled with firsts.

In 1941 the big sis committee was formed for the purpose of orientation of freshmen; in '42 the monthly newspaper, "Lindley Lines," was first published, and that same year a Christmas candlelight procession through the halls was held for the first time. By 1943 the girls were busy with wartime activities: working for the Red Cross, organizing book drives and fixing kits for soldiers. The following year the Lindley glee club made its debut.

The University faced an acute housing shortage in 1946, and tripling-up became the order of the day, something which lasted during the two ensuing decades. Lindley won the Women's League plaque for scholastic achievement for the first time in 1949, and the same year entered its first float in the Homecoming parade.

Toward the end of the forties, two residents — Marilyn Glenn and Becky Parkinson, both '50 graduates — put their heads together and wrote the "Halls of Lindley," which became the dorm song.

The decade of the fifties in Lindley was one of dorm championships, dances and queens. Between 1950 and 1960, the girls captured the Tekequacades trophy seven times; won Siglympics in 1952, and were dorm volleyball champs in 1958 and 1959. Residents continued their annual Cherry Pic Formal every February, danced to the music of Wib Lanning's orchestra at an Autumn Nocturne in November, 1951, and the following November staged a Dixie Dreamland with Howie Chapman's orchestra.

Joanne Goodson was crowned 1951 Sweetheart of Scott Quad (a men's dorm at that time) and Rae Indoe was on the J-Prom court. The Independent Sweetheart of 1952 closely affiliated with the Vanderphoons; the Lunabelles, a society of mutual defense organized on 2nd Center to combat persecution from the Vanderphoons and the Spastics, and finally, the Linglangists of 4BS who organized to make a Japanese orchid feel at home in America. A Linglangist passing the plant would say, "ling-lang." So ended the fifties.

Lindley began the 1960s smoking for charity. By collecting five pounds of zips from cigarette wrappers, the girls from Front Mez provided a wheel chair for Barney's Children's Hospital in Dayton in March, 1960. That same year a Lindley resident, Jan Jones, was Athena queen.

The topic of conversation in Lindley for a long time was telethon with Washington Hall in 1962. The telethon began on January 7, ran for 408 hours (17 days) and finally ended as finals' week approached. The telethon set a new record, destroying the one of 238½ hours held at San Diego. Among the suggested subjects for discussion during those long mid-morning hours were:

cafeteria food, professors, jokes, sex, their roommates, your roommates, this telethon."

Advanced topics for the more erudite and garrulous included:

"Lao-Tse as a capitalist; Pope John as a capitalist; Kruschev as a capitalist; the economic role of the PTA in modern America; 17 reasons why our telethon will raise general telephone stock five points on the American Stock Exchange."

The telethon's brainchild was Washington Hall's social chairman, John Kolvereid, whose original plan for a room jam was not too well accepted by dorm officials.

Just as Lindley had started off 1962 in the news, so she ended it. One early December morning, 25 men wearing stockings to mask their faces perpetrated a panty raid on the girls. The men entered the dormitory through the back doors, scooped up their booty and were gone within five minutes. Some of the estimated $100 worth of spoils showed up the next day on trees around campus.

During the sixties, Lindley continued its prowess in the swimming tank, and in 1963 the dorm's queen candidate, Suzie Carley, was named Miss Tekequacades. In 1964 Lindley carried home its biggest trophy when Gigi DeBuselle was crowned Homecoming queen; the girls finished first in the Sigma Nu Soap Box Derby of 1967; their Homecoming float won second place honors in 1968, and Tina Gilbert of Lindley was the

'69 Siglympics Miss Venus.

In the spring of 1969 the Lindley women, led by Alicia Woodson, a Lindley resident and president of student government, staged a walk-out in protest of the University's women's hours policy.

Although nothing quite so eventful as that occurred during Lindley's last two years as a residence hall, there is no doubt that the only remaining bridge between Lindley past and Lindley present is a structural one.

Paul R. O'Brien Dies in Athens

Paul R. O'Brien, '32, long-time Ohio University administrator, died March 23 at his home in Athens of an apparent heart attack. He was 66.

O'Brien was working as a part-time consultant to the vice president for development at the time of his death, a position he had held since his retirement in 1966.

He joined the University in 1946 as controller and the following year was named treasurer. From 1962 until 1966 he was vice president for business affairs. The administrator had also served as secretary to the Board of Trustees for 20 years, from 1951 to June 1971.

A native of Wellston, O'Brien was an Air Force captain during World War II, serving in the Fifth Fighter Command in the South Pacific. He is survived by his wife Kathryn, son J. Robert and two grandchildren.

A memorial fund in his honor has been established through The Ohio University Fund, Inc.

include his wife Patricia J. Kassing '50, a son and two daughters.

Alumni Association Constitution

In accordance with Article VI of the Alumni Association Constitution, it may be repealed, added to or amended at the annual meeting by a favorable vote of two-thirds of the regular members present, provided the prepared amendments have been approved by a two-thirds vote of the board of directors and published in the Journal at least 30 days before the meeting.

In compliance with the above, the following amendments to the constitution will be proposed for acceptance at the next annual meeting, which will be held in Athens, Ohio, on June 17, 1972.

Article II provides for three types of membership — regular, associate and honorary—and states that associate and honorary members are not eligible to hold office in the association. As amended, this article will read:

ARTICLE II MEMBERSHIP

There will be four classes of membership as follows:

1) Regular members: All recipients of degrees from the University and all persons who have completed one academic year in good standing and are not presently enrolled as a student.

2) Associate members: Present members of the administrative staff, faculty members, members of the University Board of Trustees and trustees of the Ohio University Fund, Inc., who are not regular members.

3) Honorary members: Persons who have or may render valuable and conspicuous service to the University and/or the association. Honorary membership shall be granted by a two-thirds vote of the board of directors.

4) Affiliate members: All undergraduate students, on the Athens campus or any regional campus, enrolled in a course of study leading to a degree.

Only regular members shall be eligible to vote or hold office in the association.

Article V provides that the annual meeting will be held in Athens on Alumni Day, preceding Commencement Day. As amended, this article will read:

ARTICLE V ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting shall be held in Athens on Alumni Day; additional meetings may be called by the board of directors. Notice of the date, time and place of the meeting shall be given to the members 30 days prior to the meeting.

Spring Sports Teams Ready For Ambitious Campaigns

Ohio University's spring sports teams got into gear as winter quarter ended in mid-March.

The baseball team, under veteran mentor Bob Wren, opened its 42-game slate with a Southern tour of eight games during spring break. Wren, never a loser in his 23 years at Ohio, will be looking for an unprecedented fifth straight MAC championship.

Pitcher Doug Diamond and second baseman Tony Gray, both seniors, are co-captains for the Wrenmen's '72 campaign. Diamond was undefeated last year, with an 11-0 record.

Coach George Klein and his Bobcat netmen opened their schedule March 18 during a seven-match tour in the Southern sunshine. Klein's tennis squad is scheduled for 19 matches, with the MAC championships set for May 19-20 at Toledo. After a building year last season, the 'Cats hope for a contender in the MAC tennis wars.

The Bobcat golfers face a nine-match slate, along with eight invitational tournaments. Coach Kermit Blosser will be looking for his 17th MAC crown in 22 years at the helm of the Ohio golf program. They, too, will be participating in the MAC championships at Toledo to cap their regular season action.

Coach Meade Burnett, in his second season of Bobcat track, will hope to improve on his second-place MAC finish last season. His schedule includes four meets, seven relays and the MAC championships. The 'Cats will also be pointing to the NCAA meet at the University of Oregon June 1-3.

Winter Season Ends with Two MAC Titles

The basketball team finished its 1971-72 play in the same up-and-down pattern which characterized the entire season. After clinching a piece of the MAC title with a victory over Bowling Green 105-84, the 'Cats defeated co-champs Toledo 69-67 in overtime in the playoff to determine who would represent the MAC in the NCAA Mid-East sub-regional at Knoxville March 11. Opposite Al McGuire's Marquette (24-2), an at-large selection, the Bobcats suffered a down day, shooting an icy 33.3 percent against Marquette's 52.5 percent, and lost 73-49.

The team ended the season 15-11 overall and 7-3 in the MAC. Senior Tommy Corde, captain, leading scorer and floor leader, was unanimously (save one vote, his own) voted most valuable player by his teammates.

Corde average 17.3 ppg on 181 of 393 field goals for a .461 percentage, and he cashed 88 of 112 free throws for .786 percent to tie (with Todd Lalich) for team leadership in that department. In MAC games only, Tommy did even better, averaging 19.3 ppg on 78 of 172 from the field for .448 percent and a team-leading 37 of 44 for .841 percent from the line. On the season, Corde scored 450 points for the seventh-best single season effort on Ohio's record books, just three points out of sixth place. He is a native of Maysville, Ky.

The hockey team concluded its 1971-72 campaign with a fourth place finish in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association playoffs in St. Louis. The Bobcats, 7-17 overall and 1-13 in the league, lost 7-1 to conference champion Ohio State in the first round and dropped a 7-6 overtime decision to Bowling Green in the second.

As anticipated, the swimming season ended in a highly contested MAC championship in Athens. Eleven pool records were bettered and ten new MAC marks posted, as Kent State ended Ohio's three-year domination by outpointing the Bobcats 162 to 139. The 'Cat tankers, with a 5-5 record for the season, finished second in the conference.

Eleven team members competed in the NCAA championships.

Two Ohio University wrestlers were accorded All-American honors, while the 'Cats finished in a tie for eighth place in the country at the NCAA championships.

Barry Reighard, Norton junior, finished third in the 190-pound weight class by winning five of his six matches and outpointing his opponents 33-10, as well as boasting one pin. Joe Zychowicz, Toledo St. Francis senior, earned fourth place in the 126-pound class, winning four of his six matches and outpointing his opponents 33-23.

The Bobcat's eighth place tie represents the highest finish ever by an Ohio wrestling team in the nationals. Previous bests were two ninth place finishes in 1964 and 1970. The matmen, who were tabbed to finish tenth in the NCAA tourney, won the MAC championship while posting a 7-5-0 season record.

Two Gridders Drafted

Two members of the 1971 football team (5-5) were drafted by pro football. Super Bowl runnerup Miami tabbed offensive tackle Al Benton, and Cincinnati's Bengals drafted Dave Green, punter-placekicker for the Bobcats.

A third member of the team, wide-receiver Bobby Allen, is expected to have a possible chance of signing as a free agent. Allen undoubtedly will wait until track season is over, as he's a dashman for Coach Meade Burnett.

Neither Benton, who was first team All-MAC the past two years, as was Allen, nor Green, a 42.9 average punt boomer last fall, had signed as of mid-March.

COACH SNYDER'S 300th victory came against Cincinnati during the '70-71 season. Celebrating in the Convocation Center in January, 1971, is Jim, wife Gayle and the 'Cats.

SNYDER IS MAC COACH OF YEAR

Basketball Coach Jim Snyder, '41, has hit many milestones in his 23 years as head basketball coach at his alma mater, and another one came this year when he was named MAC Coach of the Year for the second time in three years.

But probably never before has he had a season like the one just ended.

Unpredictable was the word that described the season and the Bobcat team itself.

A coach often can have a feeling or get a reading on his team prior to competition. "Not this gang," smiled Snyder at mid-season. "I've quit trying; I've been wrong so many times. They have proved one thing though, when they make up their minds to play, they can play with most anyone. They enjoy winning more and take losses harder than any other team I can recall. Their highs are really high and their lows are consistently low."

Among the highs were back-to-back victories over fourth ranked Ohio State (79-68) and 15th ranked Indiana (79-70), which won the 'Cats a 15th place national ranking. Three games later came one of the lows, a 104-67 drubbing at Cincinnati two nights before Christmas.

The patience and fortitude of Jim Snyder, a devout Christian and member of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, has shone through it all.

This team won Jim's sixth Mid-American Conference basketball championship (all coming since 1960) to earn him the distinction of becoming the winningest basketball coach in the 26-year history of the MAC.

Entering this season, Snyder was 12th among active major college basketball coaches, with a 308-217 reading and a .588 winning percentage. Numerous honors have been bestowed on the personable coach, including Ohio College Coach of the Year in 1961 and 1970.

Snyder, 52, has had many big moments in his career. Big thrills include: playoff win in 1960 NCAA tourney over Notre Dame, 74-66; 76-68 win over Indiana and an 87-74 success over Xavier in 1957-58, teams which later won the Big Ten and NIT respectively; 85-69 conquest of highly favored Kentucky in the semi-finals of the NCAA regionals in 1963, and four straight wins over Big Ten foes in 1969-70.

A former All-Ohio basketball player at Canton McKinley High School in 1937, Jim came to Ohio University and wound up on W. J. Trautwein's 1940-41 team which was runner-up in the National Invitational Tournament at Madison Square Garden, winning two of three games. Snyder was a guard and forward in basketball and starred at halfback for the football team.

Following graduation, he was head basketball and assistant football coach at Canton Lehman High School for a year before entering the Army and returned to those posts in 1945.

In 1946 he was named assistant football and assistant basketball coach at Ohio and in 1949 took over the head cage reins when ill health forced Trautwein to the sidelines. He was backfield coach in football until he gave up all grid duties and a full teaching load to devote full time to basketball in 1958.

In the past 13 years, Snyder's teams have made six trips to the NCAA cage tourney and one to the NIT.

Snyder has a policy of scheduling top teams, the best he possibly can. He is the dean of the MAC coaches in terms of service. His 1963 club advanced further in the NCAA play than any other MAC team in history by reaching the Mid-East regionals finals, only to lose to Michigan.

Over and over again, Snyder explains successes these ways: "Thank God we got here," or, "Someone was looking out for us," or, "Those shots don't go in unless you get some help from someplace . . ."

Admired, even by those to whom he has dealt defeat, this is "Gentlemen Jim," man and coach.
